Times Past: A Tribute to Bill and Lorraine Waller

The Wallers retired to 2066 Pappinbarra Road in 1989. On land first selected by Charlie Reynolds, the old house, which had served as a Post Office, was originally where James and Robyn Flanagan later built their house. Some of the Reynolds selection was sold to a Mr Jewiss, who cut off 50 hectares onto which he dragged the house and re-stumped it. That subdivision was sold to Mackays, who sold to the Wallers. [The larger part went to Bargwannas, then to the Flanagans.]

Born at Queanbeyan in 1934, Bill grew up at West Ryde, then Quakers Hill on Sydney's outskirts. The family raised pigs and sold veges 'off the back of a ute'. According to old friends, the Waller place there was 'a work in progress' - just like 2066 Pappinbarra Road. In sore need of resurrection, the old house inspired Bill with renovatory zeal. He would swing into action, then have another idea and swing into action on that. Lorraine was long-suffering and always supportive although it seemed no job was ever completed.

When Pat and Nancy Van de Linde took out their fuel stove, Bill gave it pride of place in his kitchen. Not in the least deterred by unfinished cupboards or partly sealed windows, he produced wonderful meals. Many waifs and strays were taken in and fed over the years. The first time I met Lorraine at All Saints, I was invited back to the Waller home for Sunday dinner. What a feast it was: soup with bread rolls straight out of the oven, baked lamb with all the trimmings, wine, beer or whisky, apple pie and cream for dessert and not a can or a packet in evidence! There was, however, a jagged hole in the plaster ceiling above us. As tongues loosened, the company were told the sorry story of Bill re-wiring the house and his sudden descent onto the dining-room table...

So Bill could turn his hand to most things - plumbing and building as well as electrical work and cooking. He had a wonderful memory for where to find his tools: "The stillsons must be down next to the pump. I had them there a fortnight ago." Like many retirees, he had a hankering to have a few animals around. The usual dogs had the run of the place, cattle roamed the mountainside, and sheep for home consumption were in the home paddock (and often out on the road - fencing wasn't a priority).

Then, harking back to his boyhood, and having enjoyed ham, pork and bacon all his life, Bill decided to raise pigs. He procured a boar and a couple of beautiful sows, duly installed in 'temporary' accommodation. The sows farrowed successfully; Bill enjoyed the squealing when he fed the fast-growing and intelligent piglets. James and Robyn did not enjoy the cohort's incursions to their vege patch! Anthony Wall was on hand when Bill suffered a heart attack; he asked what needed to be done on the farm, and was told, "Put the pigs away or they will hop into the ambulance with me."

Bill and Lorraine 1955

Bill's first job involved photolithography - transferring photos to stones for printing. Next he worked as a projectionist at Seven Hills cinema. One night there was a concert at the Memorial Hall; young Lorraine just happened to be selling tickets. Bill, working on the lights, was smitten. She had grown up on a chicken farm nearby and was just twenty at their wedding in 1955. They settled near her family in Seven Hills and Bill sold electrical gear, ultimately from his own shop. Lorraine worked as a 'Brown Bomber' [a 'pretty savage parking inspector'!] until Keith and Owen were born; Bill worked shifts as a security officer - on night patrol for about eleven years, then with the Commonwealth Bank until he retired.

As time went by, Lorraine and Bill bought several weekenders, holidaying at each one for a while before selling and buying elsewhere. This pattern was broken by Pappinbarra - no more moving on. As a childhood friend said, "Bill was in his element in his piece of Australia on the beautiful Pappinbarra River. He just loved it. He would delight in taking folk down to the river to see the platypus. He loved the birds, the logs, the mosses, the vines, the waterholes. This was on his property; no-one would be touching this. It certainly was touched by the hand of God and God had a wonderful caretaker in Billy Waller. He had a rare affinity with nature."

Bill, generous to a fault, also had a rare affinity with his fellows. Always ready to be a sympathetic ear in times of trouble, to advise, to lend a hand or a tractor, truck or block-splitter, Bill made good friends wherever he went. Lorraine was his quiet helpmate and companion. On 30 June 2006, when he gave up his long fight against illness and passed on peacefully in his sleep at only 72, Lorraine felt the earth shift from under her; she was shaken to the core. Insisting she wanted to stay amongst her friends in Pappinbarra, she was taken off to live in turn with her two sons. Forgetfulness became dementia; mini strokes were the precursor to a heart attack. She survived her life partner by just a few days more than seven years, dying aged 77 on 12 July 2013.

An inspirational couple, Bill and Lorraine Waller are fondly remembered in the Pappinbarra Valley and beyond.

Rural Fire Service Update: Hollisdale Brigade

Since 18 August this year, the Hollisdale Brigade has attended fires at Pappinbarra, Lower Pappinbarra, North Shore and Ellenborough with a total of approx 72hrs on duty.

The fire of most concern is the Lower Pappinbarra fire, which was deliberately lit at approx 11.00am on Wednesday 11 September - around the corner from the old quarry on Pappinbarra Road near Roach Road. It raced up the mountain at break-neck speed and brigades from Hollisdale, Pappinbarra, Beechwood, King Creek, Wauchope and Huntington attended. Backburns were put in to protect buildings on the top of the mountain. On Thursday 12 September all of the houses on Pythonwood Road were under threat, including Trish Crick's place. Brigades from Lake Cathie and Bonny Hills were also called upon. Backburns were used again and after many exhausting hours, tons of water and working in the choking smoke, all of the structures were saved - but the fire still continues to burn.

As I put pen to paper it is sprinkling so hopefully the rain will continue.

This fire and others are being investigated by the police. If you see suspicious activity on the side of the road please jot down any details that you can; this could help authorities should an incident occur.

I would like to thank the volunteers from all brigades for protecting our neighbours in the valley.

Chris Roelandts

BUSHFIRE DANGER PERIOD Permits to burn off are required until further notice.

Grass Fires

Never underestimate the danger posed by grass fires; they can start easily, spread quickly, produce huge amounts of heat, destroy homes, crops and livelihoods and kill anyone caught out in the open.

Protect your property by mowing, grazing, brush-cutting or ploughing around buildings, crops, pasture, storage areas and along key fence-lines to establish firebreaks. The breaks should, where practicable, avoid trees, or provide an additional break around the trees.

Protect yourself when in the vicinity of a grass fire. Keep the burnt ground in mind as a safe refuge and wear protective clothing: long-sleeved shirt and pants made from a natural fibre (cotton); sturdy leather boots and woollen socks; leather gloves; a wide-brimmed hat; face mask or towel to cover your mouth and nose and eye protection (goggles).

Take care with machinery during the bush fire danger period. Tractors, slashers, harvesters, grinders, welders and chainsaws can all start grass fires. They should be free from any faults and mechanical defects that could start a fire, be fitted with an approved spark arrestor and carry a water fire extinguisher or knapsack spray. Avoid using such machinery during extreme fire conditions. When using welders and grinders, clear the area of flammable materials.

During total fire ban days, no hot work (welding, grinding) is permitted in the open without special permission from the NSW RFS.

Bird of the Month White-headed Pigeon Columba leucomela

Other names: Baldy; Baldy Pigeon; Bally Pigeon; White-headed Fruit-Pigeon

Size: 38-42 cm. Status: Secure

The White-headed Pigeon is a large pigeon, native to Australia's east coastal regions from Cooktown in Far-North Queensland to the South coast of New South Wales. Males have a white head, neck and breast while their wings and back are black with a slight iridescent sheen of green and violet. They have a red eye-ring and a pink bill with a yellowish tip. Female birds are similar but with grey mottling to the head, neck and breast. Juveniles have a grey crown and breast. They are generally shy and wary birds.

Their voice is a low pitched "hoom-coo" or "who-uk", repeated over.

Usually occurring as nomadic pairs or small flocks, they inhabit tropical and sub-tropical rainforest, forest remnants and open urban woodland where they seek out fruiting native and introduced species, particularly Camphor Laurel. They can travel several kilometres to feed on fruiting trees in open country and will sometimes come to feeding tables where they eat grains. In the past they were plentiful, but clearing of rainforest and shooting for the pot brought about a severe decline. Since the 1950s with the protection of our native birds and re-establishment of forest, there has been a recovery in numbers, northern NSW being a stronghold for this bird.

Breeding occurs from August to January when a platform nest of sticks is built in dense tree foliage or vine tangles at heights up to 15 meters or so. The female lays one egg and both adults incubate and raise the single young. Nesting occurs only once in a season.

For further information or questions related to this or other species, contact can be made through this email address peter_fac@yahoo.com.au.

Summer breeding frogs are on the move

Leaf-green Tree frog

Over the last three or four weeks the valley has come alive again with frog chorus. The loudest and most conspicuous call is made by the Emerald Spotted Tree Frog (Litoria peroni). Its call is a descending, maniacal cackle - so loud that it can be heard for hundreds of meters across open country. Most are calling from low branches or on the ground around dams but we have heard some calling from inside forest. The Leaf-green Tree frog (Litoria phyllochroa) seems to only call along the banks of the main flowing waterways. Its call is complex, starting with a short bleat and ending in a 'chic-chic', but when many are calling together the result is a classic streamside frog chorus. With patience and a good eye, these gorgeous little frogs can be found perched inside the protective cover of a Lomandra.

The Striped Marsh Frog (Limnodynastes peroni) makes a slow 'tok tok tok', like a tone-deaf banjo player tunelessly plucking away. This species is also quite hard to see, as they sit on the ground or in shallow water under cover of grasses and sedges. Only a few seem to be calling at present but once the rain comes, they should start up all through the valley. The Sedge Frog (Litoria fallax) makes a short "zik-zik...zik" that sounds like a finger nail running up and down a fine-toothed comb; while the Bleating Tree Frog (Litoria dentata) makes a short, strident screech and often calls from places that amplify this sound even more. Both of these species can be heard and found in seemingly frog-hostile places at the moment. They might be high in the crown of isolated trees, out in the middle of paddocks, or in patches of bracken and sedges, far from any water. What do they think they are up to? Well, they have spent the winter scattered across the landscape, using patches of forest and scrub to feed and shelter. As summer approaches they are starting to move back toward the streams and ponds where they will come together to breed during the summer months. Corridors or small patches of forest and scrub that connect the riverside habitats with the forested hills are vital for maintaining the seasonal movements of our summer breeding frogs, as well as supporting many other groups of local animals.

Weed of the month - Mistflower (Ageratina riparia Asteraceae)

If you take a drive along almost any east coast road between southern New South Wales and central Queensland this weekend, chances are you'll probably see a ton of Crofton Weed (Ageratina adenophora) in flower. Its erect, showy white daisy blooms are conspicuous as is (to the keen weed-spotter) the smell of the plant when crushed, slashed or otherwise disturbed. And the impact of Crofton Weed is well known, including human allergy, stock poisoning and aggressive competition with pastures and native vegetation. What may be less-known to many locals is the similar-looking and

closely-related mistflower. In many respects, mistflower is a plant which can take over where Crofton leaves off - that is, in shaded riparian areas, steep rainforest sites and areas which might otherwise be too cool, shaded or undisturbed. Mistflower is a fast-growing perennial herb to 0.5m in height and produces abundant daisy-like flowers in winter/spring. Seed sets quickly and spreads in flowing water, mud, wind, machinery, vehicles, livestock and people. Further, stems root aggressively at joints and broken-off stem fragments can form new plants. Left unchecked, mistflower can dominate stream banks and out-compete native vegetation. One final word on mistflower is that there is a 'naturally spreading' biological control which turned up in the past few years in the NSW/QLD border ranges area. The fungus Entyloma ageratinae is proving to be quite the success story so far, so watch this space and your other weeds networks for developments on this. If the images I've seen of Entyloma release sites are anything to go by, there is definitely a new twist in this story.

Regarding any specific or general weed (or native plant) identification or control, contact Council or the DPI for further information, but if you're still having troubles, please just call or email me (petewm@hotmail.com). As always, if you have any plant you'd like identified, pop a sample in a sealed plastic bag along with your contact details into my letterbox (2011 Pappinbarra Rd) and I'll try and identify it for you.

In the Veggie Patch

That little bit of rain has spurred the gardeners on - time to get into the veggie patch. Grow rockmelon, honeydew and watermelon from seed or get them or the new mini versions in seedling punnets. Put a small amount of granular potash in the planting hole, cover with a bit of soil, add plant or seed and backfill with the remainder of the soil.

There is a great range of heirloom tomatoes available now: Black Cherry, Lemon Drop, Siberian, Principe Borghese and Cherry Roma from Diggers and Big Beef from Yates.

Watch out for aphids on new spring growth. Happy gardening!

Herb of the month: Basil – Ocimum basilicum

Active constituents include: Basil camphor, tannins and volatile oils.

Leaves – Fresh: Good for rubbing on insect bites, or added to either sunflower or almond oil to use as an insect repellent. Use in steam inhalations for colds and catarrh, include in herbal teas as well as tonics for nervous exhaustion, depression or any cold condition. They are best harvested before flowering. In cooking, minced fresh leaves add a sweet pungency to many dishes, including soft cheeses. Because of its ability as a digestive aid, basil is an invaluable addition to any heavy fatty dish, and is wonderful with tomatoes, pasta, pesto and salads.

Leaves – Dry: When taken as a tea, basil is said to alleviate stomach spasms/cramps, indigestion, gastritis, & constipation.

Basil tea has also been used as a blood purifier/tonic and to stimulate lactation in nursing mothers. As a gargle, the tea is used to treat thrush and inflammations of the throat.

Essential oil – In aromatherapy, the oil extracted from the leaves can be used for depression and is often combined with hyssop, bergamot or geranium oils for massage. Do not use the essential oil, either externally or internally during pregnancy.

Cultivation – Basil is best grown as an annual in temperate regions. It prefers a moist but well-drained soil and will grow extremely well in a container. Plant now that the soil has warmed up.

Cricket Match

The Annual Greg Ostler Shield cricket match was held on Sun Sept 8. It was a fine day, well attended, and everybody had a rollicking time. It was dirt versus tar and for the first year in a long time there was a fairly even number of players from both sides. Buoyed by playing for their own sides, many put on fine performances. 41 players in all gave the ball a hit and the scores were fairly evenly matched. Lower Pappinbarra just pipped Upper with a score of 165 to 136. Person of the match was Tristan Ostler; best fielder went to Syd Cooper and best junior player was Jye Cooper. Young Denny Michael received a certificate of encouragement for an outstanding innings guided deftly by her dad Pete. The weather clement, Angela Frost and Ken Aplin were kept busy on the BBQ, while Chay and Pete pumped out the coffee and the banana ice creams. The hamper raffle was won by Sharada Boyce. Thanks to Hastings Co-op for donating a hamper. Raffle proceeds ($100) were split between Pappinbarra and Hollisdale RFS. Thanks also to Steve Ostler for his great organizing and Chris Roelandts for keeping the score. A great day was had by all.

Editorial

It isn't easy taking over from someone who has been super-efficient! I want to thank Bev Sibthorpe for overseeing the development of Pitchfork. Under her editorship, the basic little newsheet of two years ago has been transformed into today's informative and interesting eight-page newsletter. It wouldn't have happened without Bev's drive and enthusiasm, many dedicated and talented contributors, and the continuing efforts of the production team - Angela Frost, Chay Khamson and Jan Childs. We all hope to continue the good work. If you have any ideas for articles, ads or improvements, please contact us.

As I write, RFS volunteers are putting in a firebreak in an effort to prevent further spread of the bushfire around the Pythonwood area and beyond - hard work on a hot day as a service to the community. In a rural area, as in the city, it's quite easy to hole up at home, keep to oneself and not be at all bothered about others. But what do you do if something goes wrong? What if there's a big snake in the laundry, a fire in the gully, a dingo after the calves or?? The neighbours have probably dealt with many such crises before, and they're much closer than professional fixers in town!

There are sure to be others in the Pappinbarra Valley and surrounding areas who share your interests and passions - get about, meet them and be energised and inspired. We currently have Hollisdale and Pappinbarra RFS units, PLCG (Pappinbarra Landholders Conservation Group), two cooperative garden groups, tennis starting mid-month, church every fourth Sunday, Pitchfork choir, and a proposal for a sheep-interest group. Some are volunteering their time and talents to put on a musical play (Bushed). All the horse enthusiasts of the valley might care to meet each other. The collective energy of like-minded folk is a potent force, which can enrich our community and improve our lives.

If you haven't already braved the unknown, make October the month you come along to First Friday BBQ at the Hollisdale Hall - a first step to becoming a member of our Pappinbarra community.
